This questionnaire has been prepared to help ministers and members of Presbyterian churches located in places with population of less than 10,000 to survey their churches and communities. It was prepared by the Department of Town and Country Church Work in consultation with the Office for Field Survey and under the guidance of a committee appointed by the Executive Committee of the Presbyterian Rural Fellowship, an organization of men and women with experience in town and country church work. Many of the questions were taken from The Achievement Goals for Town and Country Churches prepared and distributed by the Fellowship. Those who worked on the Achievement Goals and guided the preparation of this questionnaire for the most part are now or have been ministers of town and country churches. They have had an opportunity to observe rural churches in various parts of the country, to pool their experience and observations with other town and country church ministers, and to study the national program of the Presbyterian Church. On the basis of this knowledge, questions have been selected which will help the local church to understand its problems and its weaknesses, its strength and its opportunities.

WHY MAKE A CHURCH SURVEY?

Inasmuch as the Christian Church is an institution which has developed around religious attitudes and sentiments, beliefs and practices, in one sense its achievements cannot be measured. The questionnaire does not attempt to weigh those intangible effects of the church which have to do with revitalized human personality. There is no known instrument for determining at what moment or in what manner a church creates within an individual a clear understanding of his relationship to God and to his fellow-men, and develops within him a sense of Christian responsibility. These influences cannot be made concrete in the form of graphs and charts.

Although a survey cannot analyze the essence of a church's function, still there are certain observable results of the program and activities of a local church and certain measurable elements in its relationship with its people and its community which can be determined. For example, some understanding of the way in which a church is meeting individual and community needs is gained through a study of the trends in membership, Sunday church school enrollment, church finances; the condition of the church plant and equipment; the degree to which the program of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. is followed in the local church; the extent to which those affiliated with the church participate in its activities; its evangelistic vigor; the age, sex, nationality, educational and vocational characteristics of the people served by the church; and the relationship of the church to other churches and to the social organizations and agencies of the community.

HOW CAN THIS QUESTIONNAIRE BE USED?

The questionnaire can be used for surveys of all the Presbyterian town and country churches in a Synod or in a Presbytery or by a single church or small group of churches wishing to make such a study. Whether used by one church or by a number of churches at a time, it is suggested that the following steps be taken:

1. Notify the Synod executive or field representative that the survey is being made.

2. Provide a questionnaire for each church included in the study.

3. Arouse the interest of the local congregation in the survey by announcements from the pulpit and in meetings of various organizations within the church, and notices in the church paper, in the local newspaper, and through other media of communication if available. This should be done so that the church people will be ready to study the findings of the survey and help plan for a program of action based on the results.

4. If the survey is Presbytery or Synod-wide, it should have the approval of Presbytery or Synod. Just as in the case of the local congregation, members of Presbytery and Synod should be prepared to study and plan for the future on the basis of the survey findings.

5. Whatever the scope of the survey, a committee should be selected and given responsibility for it.

WHAT FUNCTIONS SHOULD THE SURVEY COMMITTEE PERFORM?

The survey committee should perform the following functions:

1. Prepare for the survey:

   a. Secure the cooperation of the Synod executive or field representative.

   b. Select the person or persons to be responsible for tabulating and evaluating the data and writing the report, or arrange with the Department of Town and Country Church Work of the Board of National Missions for this service.

   c. Oversee advance publicity on the survey.

   d. Adopt a time schedule for the survey; for example, for the distribution and return of questionnaires, for preparation of the report, etc.

2. Supervise collection of data:

   a. Secure questionnaires from the Department of Town and Country Church Work of the Board of National Missions, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York 10, New York, and distribute them to the pastor or a church officer in each church to be studied.

   b. Select in consultation with the minister at least three people in each local church to be studied to work with the minister or church officer in filling out the questionnaire. These people should be selected on the basis of their acquaintance with the local church and its program and with the community, and for their reputation for accuracy and dependability. The choice of these people is extremely important, for the success fo the survey depends on the accuracy and completeness of the information given by this local church group.

   c. Collect questionnaires from local churches.

   d. Check questionnaires for completeness and return them to ministers for further information when necessary.

   e. When pages 5-15 are completed, put questionnaires in the hands of the field representative or executive of the synod, for filling in of the last section and referral to the person or persons responsible for the survey report.

f. Discuss the survey report with the person or persons preparing it.

g. Help to formulate tentative conclusions and recommendations on the basis of the survey findings.

3. Follow-up on the survey findings:

a. Share the survey report and the tentative conclusions and recommendations with the sponsoring body, that is, the local congregation, Presbytery, or Synod.

b. Guide group discussion of the survey report in the local congregation, Presbytery, or Synod so that a definite program of future action will be developed.

c. Stimulate Synod, Presbytery, or the local congregation to put into effect the proposed program of action based on the survey findings.

d. Give individuals, committees, or other groups responsibility for the various parts of the proposed program of action on Synod, Presbytery, and local levels.

e. Make sure that a time schedule is adopted for the achievement of all parts of the program of action, with the understanding that certain parts can be achieved immediately, others in a matter of months, and still others over a period of years.

f. Make sure that no part of the program of action is lost sight of on Synod, Presbytery, or local level.

g. Arrange for periodic restudy as new problems arise and situations change.

HOW SHOULD THE SURVEY DATA BE TABULATED, EVALUATED, AND REPORTED?

Experience and specialized training are required to tabulate, evaluate, and report on survey findings in such a way as to lay a sure foundation for a program of advance for the church or churches included in the survey. The staff of the Department of Town and Country Church Work and the Office for Field Survey of the Board of National Missions have the training and experience required for this part of the survey process, and have had the experience in supplementing church data with significant data on the community from the census and other sources. Therefore, it is suggested that a church, Presbytery, or Synod notify the Department through the survey committee as soon as a town and country church survey is projected, and ask their help in tabulating and evaluating the data and preparing the report.

The Department will either aid in this part of the survey, or, if its work schedule will not permit that, it will at least give specific guidance and advice to the committee responsible for the survey. The address of the Department is: Department of Town and Country Church Work, Board of National Missions, Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., 156 Fifth Avenue, New York 10, New York.
The Department will also provide this questionnaire in quantity upon request.
